Charing-Cross.—As early as six o'clock the opposite space opposite Charing-cross and Trafalgar-square, was crowded to excess by persons of every rank and description, from the rich citizen to the poor mechanic, all anxious to catch a glimpse of, and to shew their loyalty to England's virgin Queen. The erections from this place to the Horse Guards are many of them tasteful in the extreme, especially at the Admiralty, where the accommodation for the ladies of the various officers of that department are very extensive. The commencement of the procession arrived at Charing-cross at half-past ten o'clock, and this was the signal for the congregated multitude to exercise might and right. Hundreds who had patiently kept their places in the front since six o'clock were forced back, and it was with the greatest difficulty the soldiers and police could prevent incursions on the line set apart for the procession. On the arrival of the carriage of Marshal Soult, Duke of Dalmatia, opposite Drummond's banking house, the hero of "a hundred fights" was most enthusiastically cheered. The veteran Marshal returned the honour with the greatest grace, and appeared highly delighted with the attention paid him. The passing of the Duchess of Kent's carriage was the signal for another rush, and we do firmly believe, that but for the police, the crowd would have carried their loyalty so far as to have forced their hands into the Royal carriage, in order to demonstrate their feelings by shaking hands with the mother of their beloved Queen. Her Royal Highness appeared highly delighted and repeatedly acknowledged the enthusiastic demonstrations of loyalty and respect towards her. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge were greatly cheered, but the applause that was conferred upon the Duke of Sussex was beyond description; it must have been most grateful to his Royal Highness, who appeared greatly affected. At ten minutes past 11 o'clock, her Majesty in the Royal State carriage passed Charing Cross. At this moment the waving of handkerchiefs from every balcony and window, and the loud huzzas and demonstrations of loyalty from the congregated thousands below, pourtrayed a scene which it is impossible for pen to describe. Her Majesty appeared highly delighted, and repeatedly bowed in the most condescending manner. Upon the Royal Carriage arriving at the Admiralty, the acclamations of the assembled multitude were renewed.

The head of the procession reached the Horse Guards precisely at 11 o'clock, and seemed to give pleasure to the whole of the vast multitude assembled, many saying that it was the finest procession which they had ever seen in this country or abroad.

Marshal Soult was much cheered as he passed along the line, with which he seemed to be well pleased.

The Duchess of Kent was most enthusiastically cheered, the ladies all waving their handkerchiefs.

The Duchess of Gloucester and the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge were also cheered, and the immense mass assembled, most enthusiastically and cordially cheered the Duke of Sussex.

The multitude of Reformers assembled in the Reform Club House were so enthusiastic in their demonstrations of loyalty as to draw the special attention of our youthful Queen, who acknowledged it by repeated bows. As the Royal carriage progressed the cheering and waving of handkerchiefs were unbounded—every hat was doffed, and many were the blessings invoked upon the head of her youthful Majesty.

Her Majesty arrived at the Abbey precisely at 32 minutes past eleven o'clock. When she alighted, all the bands played the National Anthem.

The arrival was announced at that moment by the firing of a gun.

The procession was most admirably conducted, and, so far as we were able to learn, without a single accident.

The Nave.—The great body of the general spectators were congregated in the Nave, along the sides of which galleries were constructed arranged in an amphitheatrical form, with ten rows of benches, rising above one another, and calculated to hold at least 1500 persons. The spectacle presented by this vast audience was very striking. The patience of these spectators was to be severely tried by a six hours' delay; but there were not wanting numerous objects to divert their attention and while away the tedious intervals. Those more distinguished personages who had seats in the choir had of course to pass up the nave to reach their various destinations, and were a source of perpetually changing attraction. Now, a judge of the land, with slow and legal step, paced the floor, then, a Peer of the Realm, arrayed in coronation robes of crimson velvet, edged with ermine, and coronet in hand: anon, still more attractive, came some noble dame—her splendid train spreading around her in luxurious magnificence. Between seven and eight companies of foot guards arrived and lined the hall. Many of the Foreign Ambassadors now arrived, and the novelty and richness of their dresses excited great admiration, not, however, equal to that which was awakened by the appearance of some of the younger branches of the female aristocracy, who, as they tripped lightly along the hall, seemed incarnations of loveliness and grace, their beauty needing not the aid of the costly gems that glittered around their persons. The Attorney General came in his official costume as first law-officer of the Crown. As the Royal procession slowly wound its way between the lofty aisles, the spectacle presented was one as gorgeous and impressive as anything that could well be imagined. When her most Gracious Majesty came within sight, the vast audience simultaneously rose; and a shout "loud as from numbers without number," rung through the venerable arches of the Abbey, and was re-echoed by the multitudes without, testifying in sincere and heartfelt tones the loyalty and affection with which the youthful and august monarch of these realms was regarded by her thousands of assembled subjects. Her Majesty, as she walked up the Nave displayed perfect self-possession, returning the enthusiastic greetings with which she was received in a manner marked by that union of gentleness and dignity so characteristic of her Majesty. Her Majesty was immediately preceded by Lord Melbourne and the Duke of Wellington, (as Constable of the Tower.) On her Majesty's entering the Choir, the cheering was again renewed, and was indeed only put a stop to by the opening of the Coronation Anthem. The Great Officers of State, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Noblemen appointed to carry the Regalia, all in their robes of estate, and the Bishops who were to support her Majesty, as well as those who were to carry the Bible, the Chalice, and the Patina, assembled in the Jerusalem Chamber, adjoining the Deanery, before ten o'clock, where the Regalia, having been previously laid on the table, was delivered by the Lord Chamberlain of the Household to the Lord High Constable, and by him to the Lord Willoughby d'Eresby, as Lord Great Chamberlain, and by his Lordship to the Noblemen by whom the same were borne.

The service then proceeded in the following order—the recognition; the first offering; the litany; the common service; the sermon; the oath; the anointing; the spurs; the sword; offering of the sword; the investing with the mantle; the orb; the ring; the sceptres; the crowning; the holy bible; the benediction and te deum.

The Archbishop then pronounced the benediction, the Bishop and the Peers following every part of the benediction with a loud Amen. At this interesting moment the following is a splendid view of the august scene; it is from the pencil of a very eminent artist, and the portraits of the Duchess of Kent, the Duke of Sussex, the Duke of Norfolk, Grand Marshal of England, Lord Melbourne, and other members of the Royal Family and nobility, will be recognised as faithful:—

INTERIOR OF THE ABBEY DURING THE BENEDICTION.

The Inthronization. Te Deum being ended, the Queen ascended the theatre, and was lifted into her Throne by the Archbishop, Bishops, and Peers around her Majesty, and, being so inthroned, all the great Officers of State, the Noblemen bearing the swords, and the Noblemen who had borne the other Regalia, stood around about the steps of the Throne, when the Archbishop, standing before the Queen, pronounced the exhortation, "Stand firm and hold fast,' &c. The Homage; The Holy Sacrament; Second Offering, (a purse of gold,) which the Treasurer of the Household delivered to the Lord Great Chamberlain, and he to her Majesty, from whom the Archbishop received it. The service being concluded, her Majesty, attended by the two Bishops her supporters, the Great Officers of State, the Noblemen bearing the four swords before her, and the Noblemen who had carried the Regalia then lying upon the altar, descended into the area, and passed through the door on the south side into St. Edward's Chapel; the Noblemen, who had carried the Regalia, receiving them from the Dean of Westminster as they passed by into the Chapel; the organ and other instruments all the while playing. Her Majesty being in the Chapel, and standing at the altar, delivered the sceptre with the dove, which Her Majesty had borne in her left hand, to the Archbishop, who laid it upon the altar there. Her Majesty was then disrobed of her Royal Imperial mantle or robe of State, and arrayed in her Royal robe of purple velvet, by the Lord Great Chamberlain. Whilst her Majesty was in St. Edwards chapel, the Officers of Arms arranged the procession for the return, so that all were ready to move at the moment when the Queen left the Chapel. Her Majesty then proceeded out of the Choir, and to the west door of the Abbey. Her Majesty and the Princes and Princesses of the Blood Royal then returned to the Royal Palace with the same state as in their proceeding to the Abbey.

THE RETURN FROM THE ABBEY.

The procession commenced to leave the Abbey at twenty minutes to four o'clock, but her Majesty did not get into her carriage till twenty minutes to five, when she was received in the same enthusiastic manner as when she arrived along the whole line. Her Royal Mother, and her Royal Uncle of Sussex, also received the same meed of the public approbation.

Edmund Barlow, Managing Director.

The former title of this Institution having appeared to be inconsistent with the extension of the operations of the Company, at the Annual Meeting of Shareholders held in March last, the alteration of the name from the "York and North of England" to "York and London," was determined upon.

FIRE ASSURANCE.—The Premiums are moderate, particularly on Manufacturing and Mill Risks.

FOREIGN ASSURANCES are effected by this Company, and proposals, whether on Lives, or against Fire, will be promptly attended to.

LIFE ASSURANCE.—The accumulation of Life Premiums forms a distinct fund, and will remain untouched and exempt from all charges of management till the year 1844. The Tables are calculated on the latest authenticated data, and are the lowest that can with justice and safety be adopted.

No entrance fees charged in any case.

Extracts from the Tables for Assurances of £100.

Ages	20	30	40	50	60
Premium	£1 13 9	£2 3	£2 17 3	£4 0 7	[illegible]

The certain advantage which Assurers in this Office enjoy compared with those in the bonus offices, puts responsibility out of the question, will be found by even a slight comparison of the rates. It will be seen, that the same premium which a person in his thirtieth year would pay to a bonus office to assure £1000, would in this office assure £1240, or, that while at that age a bonus office would require an annual premium of £26 14s. 2d. to assure £1000, the same sum would be assured by this Company for £21. 10s. per annum. These remarks apply even more forcibly to Assurances for short periods.

Worcester ...... Mr. John Matthews.
Leominster ...... Mr. Thomas F. Watling.
Ledbury ...... Mr. William Taylor.

NOTICES.

"D." and "Brutus" are unavoidably held over this week.

Mr. Willmer's letter arrived so late on Thursday, that it was quite impossible to attend to his request.

"Pensa."—We cannot confess to the feeling of pity [illegible] is a pitiful excuse for our correspondent to say that he signed the mendacious petition without reading it; he ought to have read the document that cast such infamous imputations on men, whose political lives have been devoted to the service of the liberal cause. As for his declarations of patriotism and principle, we would rather one action [illegible] than a thousand professions. Heaven save the mark! We have heard very vehement professors of patriotism and principle, blown about by every light puff of momentary vanity, and literally carried off their legs by a gust of despotic self-will.

Our long reports of the Coronation and its celebration in Hereford and neighbouring towns, have obliged us to omit many advertisements.

We have printed a large number of extra copies this day, but as we anticipate a great demand, we shall not this day break up our form, therefore, should any of our Agents require additional supplies to the extra number already sent, they will be pleased to write by return of post.
